Friends and Family of Forest Hills,

An old Christmas hymn starts with the phrase, "Come thou long expected Jesus, born to set thy people free." From days of old, prophets had been telling about the coming Savior. They had told about the one who would be born in Bethlehem who would be the king of the world. Little did they know that the gift of Jesus would come in the form of a little baby.

Jesus was expected. The method of His arrival was not. No one knew that their king, in fact, the king of the world of all time, would be in a humble manger, born of a virgin among the hay and the animals. No one knew that the King would come as an ordinary baby. They expected Jesus, but not like this.

Christmas is really about things that are unexpected. People receive gifts that they didn't expect. People see family and friends that are sometimes unexpected. People go through feelings and emotions that are unexpected, and sometimes quite difficult to deal with. Christmas brings about many unexpected things, but Jesus was always expected.

Those prophets long ago knew that Jesus would be the King of the world. They knew that He would save everyone from the results of their sins through His sacrificial death and His glorious resurrection. They knew of Heaven. In fact, they expected to be there one day because of Jesus.

This Christmas, you too can expect the unexpected. How can a small baby live the life that we read about in Scripture? How can this tiny gift be the source of eternal joy and eternal life? How can this tiny baby be the Savior of the whole world and our own personal Savior as well?

The answer is simple. In the tiny baby Jesus, we see God's human nature. He is very God and very man, all at the same time. He entered this world to save us from our sins, and through His life, we know that He can relate. He knows what we go through. He knows what it's like to grow up. He knows what it's like to feel sorrow, pain, even death. Most important, He knows what it's like to rise from the dead, and through His resurrection we have life.

This Christmas, you can share that story with someone else. They may not expect it, and they may not expect that this Christmas could be the first time they meet Jesus. God could be using you to bring about the unexpected. So go forward this Christmas and boldly share Jesus. Offer others a Merry Christmas (instead of Happy Holidays). Tell them that the Savior of the world has been born – a gift for them, a gift for you.
